2016 First Quarter Trading Update

- Our business model enabled us to outperform spot market indices in 1Q:
  - Average Daily Earnings
    | FY2016 Cover US$/day | Q1 US$/day | Q1 Outperformance |
    |----------------------|------------|-------------------|
    | Handysize TCE        | 55% @ $7,100 | $5,900           | +83%              |
    | Supramax TCE         | 71% @ $6,800 | $5,800           | +61%              |

- We have not taken any long-term chartered ships – we rely more on our larger owned fleet, complemented by ships on shorter-term and index-linked charters
- About 2/3 of our Supramax fleet is chartered in on a short-term basis, hence weak Supramax market rates are reducing our Supramax vessel costs as well as revenue

- New record low market freight rates for all bulk carrier types in Feb 2016
- Market rates have improved for minor bulk ships since mid-Feb (after seasonally slower winter and Chinese New Year holiday) albeit from a very low base
- Significant gap between newbuilding and secondhand prices continues to discourage new ship ordering which was negligible in 1Q
- YTD average industry freight earnings are below industry cash operating expenses for many shipowners → significantly higher scrapping in early 2016 has helped reduce global dry bulk net fleet growth → if sustained, could lead to net shrinkage of the global dry bulk fleet in 2016
Our Ability to Outperform

Our business model has been built up and refined over many years. Through a combination of the following factors, we are able to generate a premium over market rates due to our high laden percentage (minimum ballast legs):

- Experienced staff & global office network
- Large fleet of high-quality substitutable ships
- Our cargo contracts, relationships & direct interaction with end users
- An increasing proportion of owned vessels facilitating greater control and minimising trading constraints
- Handysize Segment’s versatile ships and diverse trades

Average premium last 5 years:

- Handysize TCE: US$2,650/day (FY2015: $2,760)
- Supramax TCE: US$1,800/day (FY2015: $2,550)

Self Correcting Supply Factors

New Vessel Ordering is Down

- Per Quarter annualised in % of fleet (dwt)

Increased Scraping

- FY14: 16.0 mil dwt
- FY15: 30.3 mil dwt
- 14.4 mil dwt

Fleet Growth is Reducing

- Total Drybulk Year-on-Year Net Fleet Growth (%)
- Lowest fleet growth since Oct 2003
- 1 April 2016: 2.1%

- Scapping YTD, if sustained, could lead to net shrinkage of the global fleet in full year 2016

Number of Chinese yards delivering Handy bulk vessels decreased from 54 in 2012 to 23 in 2015

- Other dry bulk scrapping

Dry Bulk Supply & Demand

Supply:
- 1Q16 net fleet growth: 2.1%
- New deliveries partly offset by increased scrapping (Handysize: 2.4% new deliveries vs 1.1% scrapping)
- Low fuel prices ➔ increasing ship operating speeds in 3Q15 ➔ increasing effective shipping supply
- Scrapping YTD indicates potential net shrinkage of the global fleet in full year 2016

Demand based on tonne-mile:
- 2015 overall dry bulk -0.8%; minor bulk: +1.6%
- Jan-Feb 2016:
  - Chinese steel exports remained at high levels
  - Chinese demand for minor bulks ↑ YOY
    - Led by ↑ in bauxite and copper concentrates
  - Robust long haul S. American grain exports (due to stronger US$ and Argentina’s relaxation of currency & grain export controls)

Our Outlook and Strategy

Dry Bulk Outlook

- Minor bulk demand is growing and less dependent on China than iron ore and coal. Reduced commodity prices is also stimulating demand.
- The shipping market has a track record of over-reacting in both directions - This is not the end of dry bulk transportation!
- Current market rates below operating cash costs are not sustainable
- Scrapping will be encouraged by low freight rates, cost of routine dry-dockings and new ballast water treatment system requirements
- Negative sentiment and low secondhand values discourage new orders and increase cancellations and postponement of newbuildings
- These self-correcting supply side factors will drive the market to better balance but the timing of the recovery is hard to forecast

Strategy

- Make the most of our business model, customer focus and position as a strong/preferred counterparty.
- Continued focus on cost savings and efficiencies (without compromising safety) and further reductions in vessel costs by redelivery of long and medium term chartered-in ships
- We are managing our business for a continued weak market in the medium term and are prioritising safety and staying power
